You are at liberty to use my name in praise of your Regulator as prepared by you, and re-commend it to every one as the best preventive for Fever and Ague in the world. I plant in southwestern Georgia, near Albany, Georgia, and must say that it has done more good on my plantation among my negroes than any medi cine I ever used. It supersedes quinine if taken in time Yours, &c., Hon, B. H. HILL, Ga.

CHILDRENI-Your Regulator is superior to any other remedy for Malarial Diseases among children, and it has a large sale in this section of Georgia.—[W. M. Russell, Albany, Ga.

CONSTIPATION. TESTIMONY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF GEORGIA. - I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for constination of my bowels, caused by a temporary derangement of the liver, for the last three or four years, and always, when used according to the directions, with decided benefit. I think it is a good medicine for the derangement of the liver-at least such has been my personal experience in the use of it.
HIRAM WARNER,

Chief Justice of Georgia. SICK HEADACHE. EDITORIAL-We have tested its virtues, personally, and know that for Dyspep-sia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world eversaw. We have tried forty other remedies before Simmons' Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief; but the Regulator not only relieved but cured us, -[Editor Telegraph and Messenger, Ma-

COLIC AND GRUBBS IN HORSES. Having had during the last twenty years of my life to attend to Racing Stock, and having had so much trouble with them with Colic, Grubbs, &c., gave me a great deal of trouble. Having heard of your Regulator as a cure for the above diseases, I concluded to try it. After trying one PACKAGE IN MASH I found it to cure in every instance It is only to be tried to prove what I have said in its praise. I can send you certificates from Augusta, Clinton and Macon as to the cure of horse.

TUESDAY, MARCH 13, 1877.

About a year ago a handsomely dressed lady,

Stranger than Fiction.

accompanied by a gentleman, stepped into a lawyer's office in New York. The lady might be slightly on the shady side of thirty, and her appearance betokened conscientious attention to the table in an excellent boarding house. She had fair hair, blue eyes, a delicious mouth, and perfect teeth. Her companion had a slight stoop in the shoulders, muttonchop whiskers, a delicate nose, gray eyes, and hands like a shoulder of lamb. He was excessively modest, and the lady did the interviewing. "I come," she began, "to see if I can quietly get rid of my husband. I don't want no noise about it, but I want to have it done quick, and to pay a fair price for it-none o' them extras and unforeseen expenses, you know," and she smiled mysteriously. "Is this gentleman your husband?" asked the lawyer, looking at the drooping masculine. "No, not exactly," said the lady, "but he hopes to be when he has a right to marry me. He is going to pay for the decree." "Where is your husband—does he object?" queried the lawyer. "O, he's in the city, and he doesn't object," in confirmation of which the lady produced a sheet of paper attested by a notary public, setting forth that Geo. Robinson, being unable to live longer in harmony with his wife, agrees to a divorce, etc., etc. The lawyer was amused with the case, and by judicious questions, obtained from the lady the history of her married life. Miss Margaret Hardy was, seven years since, one of the belles of Rugby, in western Yorkshire, England. The maiden's affections were concentrated upon one George Robinson, and to him, with the full approval of her parents, she was married on Christmas day, 1860. The first year of matrimonial life was one of uninterrupted happiness, and in the course of the moons a son and heir was born to the Robinsons. Alas! the tiny stranger did not take kindly to existence, but sickened and died, leaving the poor mother paralyzed with grief. She took to her bed and refused to be comforted. She would neither eat nor drink, and in a short time became a living skeleton. Finally, she, to all appearances, died. The poor young creature was by the express command of her father interred with her rings upon her hands, and there was a good deal of unfavorable comment among the town's people on this "criminal waste." The jewelry particularly excited the cupidity of the parish clerk, and he made minute inquiries concerning the probable value of the buried rings. Finally, three days after the funeral, at the lone hour of midnight, he crept cautiously to the new-made grave. Having removed the earth and unscrewed the coffin, he proceeded to take off the rings, but from the centracted state of the fingers, was unable to effect his felonious purpose. Increupon, with his pocket-knife, he commenced to amputate the fingers, but he had searcely reached the bone of the wedding ring finger, when, to his astonishment and horror, the corpse belted nearly upright in the coffic, at the same time uttering a wild and dismal scream. The clerk immediately start ed homeward, with his hair bristling on end. Meantime the poor woman, who had been buried in a death-like trance, alarmed at her extraordinary situation, directed her steps to her husband's residence and knocked loudly at the door. Robinson's consternation when he beheld his wife in her shroud and grave clothes may be imagined. He howled "murder" and "police," attracting a startled crowd to his residence. Then it became evident that Maggie Robinson had indeed returned from the cold damp grave in veritable living flesh and blood. Afterward the injured finger and the state of the grave pointed suspicion to the parish clerk; but having saved the woman's life, he was allowed to go unpunished and the matter was permitted to rest. Finally Mrs. Robinson, to escape morbid curiosity, implored JANNEY & CO. her husband to emigrate—a step he was very unwilling to take, because, as Mrs. Robinson avers, "he was over-head and-ears with au-other young woman in the place." Ultimately the wife's importunities prevailed, and the couple came to New York in the summer of 1872. George has carned a respectable living, and his wife and he compied, up to a few weeks since, a commodious floor on Sixteenth street. It appears, however, that he has been becoming gradually estranged from his wife, and Maggie felt that there was a "woman in the case." Recently he was sick for a fort night, and she intercepted the following letter from his whilem flame in England : YARM, October 2, 1875 .- Dearest Dearest George: I rite this to enform you that I wad hathote you wad ha gotten ridd if her long before this. I wad ha come to you my darling rite away but who shud I bee, nothi, whatsumever neither wife nor widder; and dear George you wud not like to see me that and when old Jack Hall (the pe ishel rs) tur her up, how happy we mite a been. * Yours sincerely, Mr. Frank Brows o, Mrs. R. bioson's board er, became speedily acquired with the contents of the letter, making only the brief comment. "Welt, let home. " I f y u, a of then I have no objections to owner, a the acce. There was an angry consultation, to the con-clusion of which the boarder was carred to assist. The result is as has been described. A quiet decree will be forthcoming, an another of four people will be thereby liceused to necome her alive. On, George it was a miserable day
